2016 CAME Award Winners

The CAME Awards Committee, chaired Dr. Brian Simmons, University of Toronto, is pleased to announce the recipients of the 2016 CAME Ian Hart and Meridith Marks Awards.

Ian Hart Award for Distinguished Contribution to Medical Education: Established in 1992 in honour of Dr. Ian Hart, founder of CAME, this award recognizes senior faculty who have made an exceptional contribution to medical education throughout their academic career. CAME is delighted to present the 2016 Ian Hart Award for Distinguished Contribution to Medical Education to Linda Snell MD MHPE FRCPC MACP, Professor of Medicine and Core Faculty at the Centre for Medical Education, McGill University, and Senior Clinician Educator at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada.

Dr. Snell is active in teaching, education leadership and education research at all levels of medical training. She has served in numerous educational and clinical leadership roles at McGill, the RCPSC, nationally and internationally. She presents workshops and invited lectures across Canada and worldwide. Her current interests include: faculty development for competency-based education, advanced training for clinician-educators; learning, teaching and assessing CanMEDS competencies, leadership in medical education; and education scholarship. Dr. Snell continues to practice general internal medicine.

CAME Meridith Marks New Educator Award: The 2016 Meridith Marks New Educator Award, named in honour of Dr. Meridith Marks, recognizes individuals in the first phase of their professional career who have made a significant contribution to medical education. CAME is delighted to present the 2016 Meridith Marks New Educator Award to Tina Martimianakis MA, MEd, PhD, the Director of Medical Education Scholarship and an Education Researcher at the Department of Paediatrics, and a Scientist at the Wilson Centre for Research in Education, University of Toronto.

Dr. Martimianakis holds a Masters in Political Science from Wilfrid Laurier University, a Masters in Higher Education and a Doctorate in Higher Education, both from the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education. Drawing on critical social science theories and Foucauldian discourse analysis, she studies the material effects of discourse including how organizational practices associated with discourses of collaboration support or hinder the capacity of interprofessional teams to practice and learn together, and how discourses of integration manifest in every day medical education practice. She has published in leading medical education journals such as Social Science and Medicine, Medical Education, and Medical Teacher. As an educator, she works to enable clinician educators to incorporate complex negotiations of the social world in their educational planning. Dr. Martimianakis supervises clinical and social science students at all levels of training and teaches at the Wilson Centre, the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, within the Department of Paediatrics and across the Faculty of Medicine, University of Toronto.

We invite you to join your colleagues at the CAME Awards Luncheon and Lecture on Monday, April 18, 2016 in Montreal to recognize these award winners. Tickets for the CAME Luncheon are available for purchase when you register for CCME 2016 (<http://www.mededconference.ca>). Please communicate this news internally to your colleagues and encourage them to join us in congratulating these outstanding individuals for their contribution to Canadian medical education.
